

Jacob E. Levin, Ph.D.

Director of Research Development
Office of the Vice President for Research Massachusetts Institute of Technology

jelevin@mit.edu

Jacob E. Levin, Ph.D. is Director for Research Development at MIT. His responsibilities include leadership and coordination of large research proposals, securing resources and funding for faculty research programs, and serving as the VPR's liaison to entities on and off campus. Previously, Dr. Levin was Assoc. Vice Chancellor for Research at UC Irvine, where he led the Research Development Office and spearheaded the campus-wide partnership with the University of Tsukuba. Jacob is a AAAS Fellow, MIT startup founder, and past-President of NORDP.